CORRECTION -

In our last "RR News From DNR" we reported a recent EPA grant awarded to the City of West Allis to help with the investigation and cleanup of the former Wehr Steel site. That grant was an EPA Brownfields Assessment Demonstration Pilot grant, not a Sustainable Development Challenge Grant as reported in the story. The EPA has not yet announced the next round of applications for the Brownfields Pilot grants, but we will send that information as soon as it is announced. For more information on the EPA Brownfields Assessment Demonstration Pilot grants, look at the EPA's brownfields web page: <http://www.epa.gov/brownfields> The EPA is currently accepting applications for the Sustainable Development Challenge Grant as described in the story.
